What is Early College High School?

Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School (LBJECHS) is a small school designed for students to earn both a high school diploma and an associate's degree or up to 60 hours of credit toward a bachelor's degree.

LBJECHS has the potential to improve high school graduation rates and better prepare all students for high-skilled careers by engaging them in rigorous, college preparatory curriculum and compressing the number of years towards a college degree.

Why Early College High School?

Did you know that...

For every 10 students that start high school:

- 8 will finish and obtain a high school diploma
- 6 will enroll in a post secondary institution
- Only 3 will complete a bachelor's degree within 10 years

A post secondary education is essential for financial and personal freedom in today's economy. A four-year college graduate earns two-thirds more than a high school graduate does. An associate's degree translates into significantly more earnings than with a high school diploma alone.

At Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School, you are on the path to success!

The United Independent School District has partnered with Laredo College to offer students the opportunity to earn both a high school diploma and up to 60 hours of transferable college credits or an associate's degree.

Students at Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School begin taking college courses as 9th graders and follow the program throughout the four years. Students will graduate from high school in four years and can complete up to 60 hours of transferable college credit.

What is the difference between Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School & dual enrollment or Advanced Placement?

What sets Early College High School apart from dual enrollment, Advanced Placement, and other pre-college programs is the rich and coherent academic program and a relentless focus on underrepresented students. Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School, Advanced Placement, and dual enrollment programs give students an understanding of post secondary education, yielding multiple benefits to students. However, only Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School:

- Fully integrates students' high school and college experiences, both intellectually and socially;
- Enables students to earn up to two years of college credit towards a degree while in high school;
- Blends the curriculum as a coherent unit, with high school and college-level work into a single academic program that meets the requirements for both a high school diploma and an associate's degree or certificate;]
- Grants college credits through the postsecondary partner institution and enables students to accumulate the credits toward a degree from that institution or to a university.

Why is it important for students to earn two years of college credit while in high school?

LBJECHS prepares high school students for successful career and educational futures through integration of high school and college courses in preparation for the work force. Students will develop the knowledge and skills necessary to become critical thinkers, problem solvers, and successful members of our community.

LBJECHS graduates will have a significant advancement on their paths towards their baccalaureate degree. It also provides students access to support structures (academic, emotional, and social) that will enable students to navigate the educational process in higher education. (LC MOU)

What can students do after they complete Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School?

When students complete LBJECHS, they have a high school diploma and up to 60 hours of college credit or an associate's degree. This serves as evidence that ECHS students are significantly more likely to graduate from high school, more likely to enroll in college and more likely to earn a degree. (Hurst & Uribe)

How much money can students save by going to Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School?

Lyndon B. Johnson Early College High School graduates can earn up to 60 hours of transferable college credit, the equivalent of two years of college or an associate's degree.
